"Here is a little piece on the celebration that a few of us pre-1970 old girls went to at Kenya High School last month, on the occasion of the school's centenary. I managed to find about five "girls" to come and we received a wonderful reception from various members of staff and any school that was there. All seemed thrilled that we made the effort to attend. A long day, we got there at 10 am and were shown to excellent seats; it was a long wait but lots of chat so the time went very quickly. The grounds and all the buildings are kept beautifully. The President, H.E. Mr. Kibaki, was the guest of honour and there were quite a few ministers there. The President and his entourage went round the school and Mr Kibaki laid the foundation stone for a new building called the Century Building. The speeches were excellent and were followed by the cutting of a huge cake. We were taken to President and introduced and I ate cake with him! I think the VIP's were more excited about meeting the granny of the Olympic swimmers than they were in meeting the old from yesteryear! Lunch was served at 4 pm but we excused ourselves, confessing that I was an old lady and had had enough excitement for one day! It was a memorable day and since I am unable to be at the reunion in England, this was the next best thing. I can add that I was indeed proud of being an old girl of the school."
